DAMAGES FOR LIBEL.

WATERSIDE WORKERS' CASE.

The hearing of the action in which Henry Green and John Meikle, waterside workers, claim damages for libel from the New Zealand Waterside Workers' Federation, James Roberts, secretary to the federation, and the Maori Printing and Publishing Company, Wellington (Sir John Findlay, K.C., and Mr. Cahill), was concluded in the Supreme Court, Auckland, on Monday, before Mr Justice Salmon and a jury of twelve. The alleged libel was contained in a circular letter to be an official report of a conference of the federation at Napier last December, when a discussion took place regarding the refusal of plaintiffs and James Colvin, another waterside worker, to pay a "legal aid" levy.

The cross-examination of the defendant Roberts was resumed. He said the conference knew the Auckland Union should have taken a ballot before imposing a legal aid levy.

Edward Slott, local marine superintendent for the Union Steam Ship Company, and a representative of the shipowners on the Disputes Committee, was the committee worked very well until Green was appointed, and then there was nothing but trouble. Green continually made abusive remarks and ultimately witness and the other representative of the employers refused to sit with him.

Nicholas Saunders, president of the Auckland Waterside Workers' Union, said Green was a menace to unionists generally. He had caused trouble on the Auckland waterfront at far back as 1911. His conduct at meetings of the union was very unruly.

Evidence to similar effect was given by Charles Weaver, an ex-president of the union, and others.

Sir John Findlay made three submissions: (1) That there was no evidence of libel; (2) that if there was, the occasion was privileged, on the ground that it was a communication by the federation or its executive to persons having a common interest; and (3) that there was no evidence that the privilege was destroyed by malice on the part of the defendants.

HIS HONOR'S SUMMING UP.

His Honor, in summing up, said the case seemed to be one of considerable importance. Most libel actions were of no importance except to the parties concerned, but this raised a question of importance to the working men of the country. He reminded the jury that all the evidence was concerned with Green, and that nothing had been said against Meikle. There was singularly little conflict of evidence as to the essential facts. It was admitted that the "legal aid" levy, out of which the trouble arose, was illegal. It was made by the Auckland union in defiance of its own rules. It was also admitted that the plaintiffs disapproved of the levy in order to save one shilling a year. The refusal to pay was followed by a refusal of the executive to grant membership.

"A MATTER OF PRINCIPLE."

The substance and essence of the report of the conference of the federation at Napier was that the defendant was charged with disloyalty in bringing actions for damages against the union. It was maintained that because they refused to pay the levy they were disloyal to the union, and that because they were disloyal to the union, they were not fit to be associated with. It was for the defendants to prove that the statements were true. The jury had to determine whether the defendant was properly charged with being disloyal to his union because he refused to pay a levy which was illegally exacted from him.

The magistrate, Mr. Poynter, made certain statements on the plaintiffs in the action in the Magistrate's Court. His Honor said he would not have referred to the matter but for the probability that the defendant would be charged with disloyalty in bringing actions for damages against the union. The magistrate gave judgment for the plaintiffs, and the defendant appealed.

The issues placed before the jury were: (1) Were the statements complained of defamatory? (2) Were they true? (3) Were they published maliciously? (4) What damages, if any, should be awarded?

The jury retired shortly after five o'clock, and after three hours returned a three-fourths majority verdict in favor of the plaintiffs. They answered the first question in the affirmative, the second in the negative, and the third in the affirmative, and that the statements were published maliciously by all the defendants. Each plaintiff was awarded £200 damages, and costs on the lowest scale.

At the request of Sir John Findlay the new trial was extended to ten days.

WHY SUFFER PAIN?

The great value of medicinal warmth in the treatment of pain and blood congestion, as well as in the various inflammatory conditions of the body, has been affirmed by scientific research, and established by medical practice. This application of concentrated heat is effected by using a specially medicated cotton wool, known as Wawne's Wonder Wool, the fibres of which are impregnated with valuable medicinal pain-relieving essences. The natural warmth of the wool, re-enforced as it is by these medicinal essences, creates a pleasant tingling, warming sensation, which relieves blood congestion and stimulating circulation, banishes all pain and inflammation. Sore Throat, Croup, Headache, as well as Toothache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Gout, etc., may at any time be relieved under its stimulating, warming influences. Wawne's Wonder Wool is approved by the medical profession, is in constant use by nurses in the leading hospitals and elsewhere, and has been praised by tens of thousands for its simplicity, ease to keep on, clean, sure in its work.

Wawne's Wonder Wool costs but 2/6 at chemists or stores, or post free from the N.Z. Agents, Ballmann and Spraggon, Ltd., Wellington.—B.

MAGISTRATE'S COURT.

At the Magistrate's Court, before Mr J. S. Barton, S.M., judgment was given in the following undefended civil cases:—James Chrisp (Mr H. Chrisp v. W. Fabian, £5 11s 6d, and costs £2 1s; Borough Council v. Mr. H. Chrisp, £2 1s 6d, and costs £3 4s; Daniel McKeague (Mr Bullard) v. Patrick Sheridan, £2 15s, and costs 8s; L. C. Arthur (Mr Coleman) v. A. S. Parker, £39 15s 6d, and costs £2 1s; Henry v. E. G. Broughton, £2 6s, and costs 15s.

TENANCY CLAIMS.

A tenancy case occupied the Court, when John Sumner (Mr Bullard) proceeded against Hilary James Hilary (Mr Graham). The case was based on undue hardship which would devolve on him and his wife should he have to give up possession to plaintiff, a single man. He made over to him another house, but had been unable to do so. After hearing the evidence, His Worship gave judgment for defendant, the order for possession being refused, on a ground that the defendant's case was based on undue hardship which would devolve on him and his wife should he have to give up possession to plaintiff, a single man.

A further civil claim, in respect of the occupancy of a house was heard, when S. Reid (Mr Bullard), claimed possession of a house from Henry Curry, the present tenant.

Samuel Reid, laborer, a single man, with dependents numbering ten, and until recently living in the house, had been ordered to give up possession of the house in order that his brothers and sisters would be near a school. He had bought the house from Mr Rowan, with a mortgagee's consent.

Questioned by defendant, witness stated that his home at Pouawa was five miles from a school.

Robert Rowan, settler, deposed that he had been owner of the house at present occupied by defendant. When plaintiff purchased the house from witness, he had suggested witness to assist in obtaining possession in order to do this, offered defendant the house he was living in, but defendant refused this on the grounds that it was too small. Witness went to the house to find another larger house, and offered this to Curry, who however, again refused to give up the other house, remarking that plaintiff had no means of making his own home, unless he wanted to go out. Witness had paid rent on the latter house until the present, in order to secure possession to plaintiff of the house purchased by him.

Henry Curry, defendant, a married man with four children, said that the house he was occupying was a six-roomed house. In addition to his own family, witness had had three other relatives living in the house, but at present they were not there. Witness had made no other offer of a house to go to, but the house offered to him by Mr Rowan was not at all suitable. He thought there was a reasonable possibility of getting a house in Stout Street.

The rent demanded for the house proposed for him by the plaintiff was 30s per week, and he was paying for his present house 25s.

Cross-examined by Mr Bullard, witness said that he was to have first refusal of the house in Stout Street when the tenants got out. Witness understood that the present tenant was going out. He would not occupy the house for himself for six months. Witness had never done anything to spoil the sale of the house to the plaintiff, and he was willing to go out of the house, and if he had to go out, would make any arrangements rather than go into the house provided by Mr Rowan.

The hearing of the case was adjourned in order that the premises at present occupied by the defendant, and also the house found for him, might be inspected by the Magistrate.

After carrying out an inspection of both premises the Magistrate announced that judgment would be delivered at 9.45 a.m. to-morrow.

ALLEGED THEFT.

A young man named Eric Robert Alexander was charged with having on July 23, received sums amounting to £5 on terms requiring him to account for and pay to the New Zealand Post and Telegraph Department, Gisborne, £5 which he had fraudulently omitted to do so and did convert the same to his own use, thereby committing theft.

"MENTAL CRUELTY."

MRS. CHAPLIN'S COMPLAINT. NEW YORK, August 4.—Charlie Chaplin's secretaries have helped him to make, according to an interview with Mrs. Chaplin, published in the New York Tribune, the comedian's wife, who is suffering from a nervous breakdown, "mental cruelty," said: "I would not say anything to hurt Charlie, but I thought everybody knew he was interested in Socialism. He brought Radical friends to the house. I did not like them, and I would not eat with them. The trouble with Charlie's Socialism was that he wanted to do the preaching and not the practicing. He talked a lot about how wrong it was to spend money on luxuries. That is why he would not let me have a car, though he had a big machine himself. When I was in hospital with the baby was born he promised me a motor-car. He was very good and kind, but when I got well he sent me an old second-hand car. I did not take any interest in having pretty things. I had to buy his with my own money; otherwise he would have gone with holes in them. At Christmas he sent me a diamond ring and told me to trade it for anything I wanted. I told him I would rather have had a rose he had given me his own record. That was the first Christmas since we were married, and I cried all day."

It is an established fact that children are more susceptible to prevailing ailments than adults. #### SYDNEY WOOL SALES.

THE ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION accorded the new programme at Everybody's was an indication of how highly picture sales are appreciated in British production. The chief feature is another "Dick Carson Wins Through." The third degree has been used many times in pictures and on the stage, but rarely with such striking success as in the Hepworth feature, "Dick Carson Wins Through." In this case the young wife of a man she does not love, and has been married to for two years, is shown before her husband, and proves by his demeanor that he is the guilty man. The scene provides the thrill of the picture, and is notably intense in its setting and portrayal. Another feature is Henry Edwards and Christie White, two of England's foremost screen artists. Some settings of wonderful beauty are shown in a picture depicting England at her best in the garments of early spring. Another excellent attraction, "A Kentucky Cinderella," starring Guy Clifford, in one of the famous Blue Bird feature film follows with artistic detail the indefinable charm of the popular story of the same name. The play opens in California at the time of the gold rush of '49, with the heroine about to leave for Kentucky. She meets with the humiliation of often recorded poor relations, and becomes a servant in a filthy southern mansion. How she succeeds in getting out and fame makes a pretty romance. "Spliced and Sealed," a rollicking play was a source of much enjoyment to old and young, whilst the new feature, Graphic help to complete a capital programme, which will be repeated to-morrow.

THE PICTURE HOUSES.

EVERYBODY'S SUCCESSFUL BRITISH PHOTO-PLAYS. The enthusiastic reception accorded the new programme at Everybody's was an indication of how highly picture sales are appreciated in British production. The chief feature is another "Dick Carson Wins Through." The third degree has been used many times in pictures and on the stage, but rarely with such striking success as in the Hepworth feature, "Dick Carson Wins Through." #### PALACE THEATRE.

"Sacred Silence," presented at the Palace Theatre yesterday, makes an instantaneous success. Starring William Russell, the story contains an interesting and never losing thread of the narrative. The plot revolves round a girl, three men and one woman; the wife of Colonel Brooke falls desperately in love with a young lieutenant, and the result is a tragic love story. The play is a war story, but the action takes place in the ranks, and in the poorer part of a large city. "Sacred Silence" interests every class of playgoer. The cast is a splendid one. End Bennett has been seen in "The Law of Men," another powerful story. Usually End Bennett is seen in plays of the super-sentimental class, but in "The Law of Men" he is a real character, and has a play that calls for a very dramatic acting, and she meets the demand forcefully and artistically. A Sunshine comedy, "The Roaming Bathub," is a happy, light, and kept the audience in a state of enjoyment for nearly half an hour. Every foot of the comedy is laughable, and the laughter is quick with humor. A Burton Holmes tragedy showing scenes and scenes around the capital is crowded with interest; it not only shows the manners and customs of the Japanese, but gives glimpses of pretty scenes on the rivers and coast. The greatest of which there are three, are also worth special mention. The whole programme is filled with superb entertainment.

HOODINI AT HIS MAJESTY'S.

Henry Houdini is, perhaps, the best advertised man in the Empire. For years he spent his life demonstrating to the various police and detective organizations in all parts of the world the fallacy of using iron bars in prisons as a means of safe keeping. Houdini is a man of great ability as a criminologist. Houdini is an actor of great renown. Arthur B. Reeve, the clever writer of the Craig Kennedy stories, writes a play, on particular ideas, which Houdini has written and acted by the head of the Scotland Yard detective force; it is called "The Grim Game." The action of the story is told in six thrilling acts, every critic says that "The Grim Game" has more thrills than any play ever conceived, and the romance which carries these thrills is one of the best of its kind ever written. The heart in the play is the greatest of which there is heart interest, that grips by reason of its truth to human nature. Picture-lovers will have in "The Grim Game" not only a powerful play, but a play which contains the greatest thrills ever produced. A coherent, clever narrative, and staged in a manner that excites wonderment.

EXPENSIVE TO SAY "PLEASE."

WINNIFRED August 5.—To say "please" in telegrams the people of Canada spend $200,000 a year and the people of the United States more than twice that amount. Mr. Davies, superintendent here for the Great North Western Telegraph Company, has arrived at this conclusion after many hours of calculation based upon the number of telegrams of telegrams that have passed through his hands. "But," he says, "paradoxically, patrons of the telegraph companies are not paying any more for it than they cut out the pleases." He explains that in about 99 out of every 100 cases, the monosyllable is contained within the ten-word limit of the day message or the fifty-word limit of the night message. "So it's the company that pays for the 'pleases,' usually," he asserts. "But we are glad to see it in so many messages. It shows that the public is more breeding in business, so its use is commendable, and I notice that its use is becoming more and more common."

Mr. Davies says, that some time, when he has two or three minutes to spare, he goes to try to calculate how much paper and ink is wasted by telegraph senders. The average person who comes down to the office to send a message writes the message four times before getting a satisfactory copy," he declares. After many years of observation Mr. Davies has concluded that the telegraph patron has more trouble, confusion, and delay in sending a message than he has in sending a letter.

Although companies dislike padded messages, they also want to get the opposite fault. "Some people delete so many prepositions and articles that the message cannot be understood by the receiver," Mr. Davies says. "On one occasion we had to send four telegrams to explain one."

The sugar ration in Great Britain was increased on August 9 from 8oz. to 12oz.

In the course of his story of the flight from England to Australia, Sir Vickers-Smith states that he was in Rangoon a year before he was in a little Caudron, though the latter had three days start of them in leaving France. The arrival of two aeroplanes in one day in a city that had never experienced a plane created enormous excitement among the natives. Some hundreds of them waited for twenty-four hours previously in order not to miss the first sight of this newest wonder, and the day of the arrival was observed as a public holiday which the natives spent on the streets. Sir Vickers-Smith paid a generous compliment to Poulet, and his mechanic Benoit, for getting so far in their little machine. Poulet was attempting the flight to Australia in a Caudron, but was disqualified to gain it, being other than an Australian born, but purely as a sporting aviator bent on conquering the world with his wings.
